Classrooms continue to adopt technology to keep up with the demand of students in order to increase engagement. Let’s look at the evolution of classroom technology.

The QWERTY layout was established for typewriters.

American wood pencil industry took off.

Overhead projectors started appearing in classrooms.

Video tapes started to enhance lessons.

Basic clicker concept was introduced to education.

Computers started being used in schools.

Personal computers became available to students.

Oregon Trail was widely adopted as an educational game.

Students were able to use the internet for learning.

Mobile responding apps were first introduced.

BYOD became a popular method of teaching.

79% of learners are more involved with class material when technology is being used. Evolution meets the learning needs of your students.